

Adapting cookie settings

Elfi Advocaten uses cookies. They are intended for proper website functioning and for collecting statistics with a view to possible website improvement.

Cookies (and similar techniques) ensure that information on our website is available in all formats and forms. We also maintain statistics on the use of our website. This enables us to keep our navigation and information supply relevant and on an optimum level.

We use the cookies specified below:

Functional cookies

Functional cookies are necessary for optimal website functioning. These are (necessary) standard cookies that are not deleted in case cookies are not accepted.

Cookies for statistics

Cookies for statistics are necessary for analysing website visits and improving our website. For this purpose we use Google Analytics. Here you can read more about Google privacy policy. Cookies for statistics are (necessary) standard cookies that are not deleted in case cookies are not accepted.

Cookies for testing improvements

For us to be able to find out if changes introduced to our website are real improvements indeed, we perform A/B-tests by way of Visual Website Optimizer. Cookies for testing improvements make you land on the correct version of a page so that we can measure results.

Your settings are recorded in a cookie. If you delete cookies from your browser, your corresponding choice will not be recognised during your next visit to our website. In that case you will be informed about the use of cookies again and your permission will also be asked again.
